Doctor Profile Gastroenterology, Hepatologist & Endoscopist

Dr Edward Shelton

MBBS, FRACP

Dr Edward Shelton graduated with Honours from Monash University and completed a Luminal and Inflammatory Bowel Disease (IBD) Fellowship at Monash Health. During his advanced training, he also focused on endoscopy and liver disease, including viral hepatitis and transplant hepatology.

He undertook a further Advanced IBD Fellowship at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, where he held a position as a Research Fellow in Medicine at Harvard University and published research on biologic therapies in IBD. Dr Shelton holds a public position at Monash Health where he is involved in clinical trials, giving his patients access to the latest biologic therapies.

He consults privately in Kew and manages inpatients at Epworth Richmond. Dr. Shelton supervises advanced trainees in gastroenterology and is a Clinical Senior Fellow in medical education at Melbourne University.

He is also one of a handful of IBD physicians in Australia who perform intestinal ultrasound and established the ultrasound service at Monash Health.
