Doctor Profile General Surgery Upper Gastrointestinal

Dr Enoch Wong

MBBS FRACS MSurg BMedSc

LANGUAGES: Cantonese

Enoch is an Australian and internationally trained general and upper gastrointestinal surgeon with a particular interest in surgical oncology, minimally invasive surgery and interventional endoscopy. Enoch completed his general surgical training through Eastern Health achieving his Fellowship with the Royal Australasian College of Surgeons (FRACS) in 2019 and then subsequently undertook several fellowship years specializing in upper gastrointestinal surgery at Box Hill Hospital, Fiona Stanley Hospital in Perth and at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham UK.

Enoch enjoys meeting with patients and their loved ones, helping them to understand their condition and tailoring a treatment plan that is most suitable to their needs. He is known for his compassionate and empathetic approach, and his professionalism and attention to detail in surgery. He treats and manages conditions such as hernias, gallstones, reflux and hiatus hernia, skin excisions, lumps and bumps, oesophageal and gastric cancer and performs interventional gastroscopy as well as ERCP.

Enoch consults publicly at Box Hill Hospital, St Vincent's Hospital and privately at Epworth Eastern Hospital.
